

Monica Trivedi is a Consultant in Intensive Care Medicine and Lead for Deteriorating Patients at Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge. In her time there she has introduced Early Warning Scores and a Rapid Response Team to improve the care of deteriorating patients, leading to one of the lowest cardiac arrest rates in the UK. She is currently working on the integration of continuous remote monitoring with electronic patient records. Other interests include patient safety and rehabilitation after critical illness.