

under, which he hoped would be of use. He went will be too communicative about himself & has been boasting about his money & his sword exercise - Frank begged he would learn to hold his tongue & when he went into school at night to enter quietly without that breath of air he puts on & thumping all the little boys, & then he is very much surprised that they thrust him in return - in short various were the lessons we gave him yesterday & we already set all improvement ~~in~~ he has begun to lose that conceited air & to talk less - he is so obedient & good tempered that he will very soon be all we can wish. As for his lessons he gets on famously with them & has received great praise from Mr. Burdett & Perry - your brothers have hard work to keep him clean. Billy held him the other day whilst Frank brushed his hair - then his eating has been noticed by the boys taking up things with his fingers - in short many have been his misdemeanors and a heavy neck ~~it~~ has been to your brothers but they seem to have been all kindness & I hope now the wool is over. Our childrens party last Monday went off very well - Miss Mischeuse was reckoned the Belle & the poor Pole came quite nicely dressed. Heby was rather troublesome getting the boys partners to Frank's great annoyance & his Aunt Jane was obliged to give him a set down: As for little Hale he really has become quite a nice boy both in his looks & manners & it makes one more than ever in love with a Public School. Mr. Chapman brought with him an American Professor of Chemistry who had been "dining in Hall & is come to England in order to see the different Public Institutions - he was a very agreeable sensible man & your Grandfather was amused by his conversation. Mr. Chapman called the other morning & made some awkward speeches to me about your having asked Carter to stay two days with you at Cambridge - I told her that I was sure your Grandmother would be much pleased at your showing your gratitude to her & Mr. Chapman by any attention you would pay to their requests, this seemed to please her and satisfy her. Mary is just now writing to Anne Mansfield to hope she will come to us next week. Your Mother I believe is by this time at home. I forgot to tell you that Emmie went by appointment with her Father on the Monday to see the Dukes & Princess & the latter gave her a handsome brooch. Herbert saw them on the Sunday. We are all very fond of Emmie she is quite unaffected & simple in her manners & at the same time very brilliant & amusing. Mary called last week in Charlotte St & saw poor Mr Constables two brothers she
