

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE FELLOWSHIP AND COLLEGE LECTURESHIP IN LAW

The College intends to appoint a College Lecturer in Law. The post is for a fixed term of 5 years, starting on 1st September 2023, and carries with it a Fellowship at the College (the Yates Glazebrook Fellowship in Law).

The Lectureship is intended to provide a valuable development opportunity for a fixed term to an individual at the beginning of her or his academic career to allow her or him to build teaching skills, a publication record and other academic activity with a view to obtaining a permanent lectureship at the University of Cambridge or elsewhere after holding the Lectureship. In addition to individuals who have already started their academic career or are finishing their graduate studies in Law, the College is equally interested in individuals with some teaching experience considering a switch from legal practice to academia.

The person appointed will be expected to reside in or near to Cambridge. They will be expected to supervise (i.e., teach small groups of students) for 200 hours[†] per year, which corresponds to approximately 10 hours a week during the three terms of the academic year, to act as Director of Studies in Law, to engage in research and publication of an international quality, and to undertake other College offices or duties appropriate to an early-career appointment if asked to do so. They will be expected to take a full part in the teaching of Law in the College. Teaching duties will include:

working closely with the other Fellows in Law to create an environment in which our students can thrive; helping with the undergraduate admissions process, in particular with the interviews in December; participating in and arranging intellectual and social events for our undergraduate and graduate students; taking part in recruitment and outreach events and activities; and attending meetings of the College's Educational Board and of the Faculty Directors of Studies. There may be opportunities for the successful candidate to engage with the University Faculty of Law, for example in lecturing and examining, but this is not a matter controlled by the College.

Besides the new appointee, the College's other teaching Fellows in Law are Ms Amy Goymour, who supervises Land Law, and Dr Findlay Stark, who supervises Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure and Evidence. There are on average 30 undergraduate Law students and 10 LLM/MCL students at the College.

Informal enquiries about this post may be directed to Dr Findlay Stark, Fellow in Law, Jesus College (fgs23@cam.ac.uk).

Person specification

We are seeking a lawyer with a strong academic record, with publications and participation in scholarly activity commensurate with the stage of the individual's career. Applicants should be able to provide supervisions in at least one of the following papers: Constitutional Law, Civil Law I (Roman Law), Tort Law, Contract Law, Equity and EU

[†] This figure assumes students are supervised in pairs. If supervision group sizes differ from this, then the required stint is for supervisions to the equivalent monetary value based on the standard supervision payment rates.

Law. If the successful candidate teaches only one of those papers, they must be able to offer supervisions in another paper from the Law Tripos, other than Criminal Law, Criminal Procedure and Evidence and Land Law.

Terms and conditions of appointment

Appointment will be for a fixed term of five years. The pensionable scale of stipends is currently £34,308—£42,155 (Points 41—48 on the University Single Spine, reviewable 1st August 2023), starting normally at Point 41 and increasing incrementally. There is a requirement to supervise for 200 hours[†] per year (the supervision stint). There is an additional, pensionable payment for acting as Director of Studies, which depends on the number of students. Payment will be made (at the standard rate for Fellows of the College) for supervisions given beyond the required stint; at the Bursar's discretion, deductions may be made at the same rate if the amount of supervising falls short of that requirement. There is an entitlement to sabbatical leave at the rate of one term for every six terms of service. Applications for leave should be made to the College Council at least a term before the start of the period of leave sought.

It is expected that the person appointed will live in or close to Cambridge. The College is normally able to offer convenient housing (throughout the appointment) at a rent that is considerably lower than market rent for central Cambridge. For a single person, there is a possibility of living cheaply in a residential set in College. A study in College will be provided for teaching and research purposes. Fellows are entitled to one meal a day, free of charge, in College and can claim a modest allowance for academic expenses.

Application procedure

Applicants should send a CV and an accompanying letter, to arrive by 4th April 2023 either to the Human Resources Manager, Jesus College, Cambridge, CB5 8BL or (and preferably) by e-mail to jobs@jesus.cam.ac.uk. Applicants should ask two referees to send (again, e-mail is preferred) supporting letters to arrive by 4th April 2023.

Interviews for shortlisted candidates will be held on 2nd May 2023 in person. There will be a formal interview, and in addition candidates will be asked to give a teaching presentation and a research presentation to the panel.

Shortlisted candidates will be asked to send a sample of their research.
